

SAD PRESENTIMENTS OF WHAT MUST COME TO PASS (TRISTES PRESENTIMIENTOS DE LO QUE HA DE ACONTECER)

CLASIFICACIÓN: PRINTS

SERIE: DISASTERS OF WAR (PRINTS Y DRAWINGS, 1810-1815) (1/82)

Tristes presentimientos de lo que ha de acontecer.

DATOS GENERALES

CRONOLOGÍA

1812 - 1820

DIMENSIONES

178 x 220 mm

TÉCNICA Y SOPORTE

Etching, burin, drypoint and burnisher

RECONOCIMIENTO DE LA AUTORÍA DE GOYA

Undisputed work

FICHA: REALIZACIÓN/REVISIÓN

24 Nov 2010 / 05 Jun 2023

INVENTARIO

836 225

HISTORIA

After the Caprices, Goya carried out a second large series of prints, Fatal consequences of the bloody war with Bonaparte. And other emphatic caprices in 85 plates. Invented, drawn, and etched by the artist Don Francisco de Goya y Lucientes (Fatales consecuencias de la sangrienta guerra con Buonaparte. Y otros caprichos enfáticos en 85 estampas. Inventadas, dibujadas, y grabadas por el pintor original D. Francisco de Goya y Lucientes), comprising 82 images. The plates vary in size from 142 x 168 mm for the smallest up to 163 x 260 mm in the case of the largest.

The exact start and finish dates for the series are unknown, but we can assume that it was begun in around 1810, since this date appears on two of the prints, no. 22, All this and more, and no. 27, Charity. Goya probably produced the first 64 of his prints on the theme of war between that year and 1814, whilst the others, his Emphatic Caprices (Caprichos enfáticos), were most likely made between 1820 and 1823.

None of the titles of the prints in the Disasters of War series were initially etched into the metal plates. Instead, Goya wrote them by hand on the first impressions, the only ones we know to have been made at the time. Before leaving Spain for Bordeaux in 1824, Goya gave these prints to his friend and ilustrado, Juan Agustín Ceán Bermúdez (Gijón, 1749-Madrid, 1829). The series later belonged to the descendants of Valentín Carderera and then to Tomás Harris, who donated it to the British Museum in London, where it remains to this day. The copperplates remained in the possession of Goya's son, Javier, who in 1862 sold them to the Royal Academy of Fine Arts of San Fernando. Later, Jaime Machen Casalis offered them to the National Chalcography Museum. It should be pointed out that plates 82 and 83 were left in the Quinta del Sordo after Goya travelled to Bordeaux and were only subsequently reunited with the rest of the series thanks to a donation by Paul Lefort in 1870.

In 1863, whilst the copperplates were at the Royal Academy of Fine Arts of San Fernando, a new edition of the Disasters of War was printed. It was then that the title of each print was engraved on to its copperplate, exactly as in Ceán's edition, where they were written in Goya's own hand. At this time, the academy also decided to change the title of the series to the much shorter one by which it is known today: The Disasters of War (Los Desastres de la Guerra), thereby broadening the scope of the work. Between 1863 and 1937, a further six editions of prints no. 1 to no. 80 were made. Numbers 81 and 82 became separated from the others, and some proofs were made from them in around 1870 and again between 1957 and 1958.

Given the fiercely critical nature of its images, it should come as no great surprise that Goya's series of prints on war was not distributed at the time it was made. In the first two parts of the series, dedicated to war and its consequences, the Aragonese artist did not take the side of either of the warring factions but instead denounced everything that war stood for. In the part of the Emphatic Caprices, he went on to produce a harsh, scathing criticism of the prevalent political regime.

The first print in the series was conceived as the point of departure for all of the images that were to follow. In its second state proof, we can see some touches of burin which Goya has used to pick out the man's hips and to deepen the shadow below his left-hand sleeve. This proof, printed in dark greyish-brown ink, was made before additional drypoint and burnishing work was applied, and before the lettering was added.

ANÁLISIS ARTÍSTICO

The likely catalyst for this series of prints was the Spanish War of Independence (1808-1814), which led the artist to reflect more broadly on violence and its consequences. This was a long and painful conflict which signified not just a struggle against the advancing troops of Napoleon but also a fracture in the Spanish people, who were divided between those supporting the French and those who remained loyal to the Spanish monarchy, firmly anchored in the values of the Old Regime.

Goya was court painter at the time, living in Madrid, and so witnessed many of the events of this war up close. He visited other fronts, too. From 2 to 8 October 1808, at the request of General José Rebolledo de Palafox y Melci (Zaragoza, 1776-Madrid, 1847), Goya was sent to Aragón to bear witness to the Sieges of Zaragoza. Despite the veracity of some of the scenes in this series, it is difficult to imagine Goya working in the places where the events took place or even making notes and sketches in the midst of the struggles. It is more likely that he simply saw some of the places where the conflict took place and then later elaborated in his mind the scenes that he would later depict in the prints.

The series is divided into three parts. The first includes prints no. 1, Sad presentiments of what must come to pass, to 47, This is how it happened, describing the whole spectrum of the horrors of war. The second part comprises the prints between no. 48, A cruel shame! and no. 64, Cartloads for the cemetery, portraying the consequences that war has upon the population, in particular hunger and famine. Last of all, in prints 65, What is this hubbub? to 82, Will she live again?, Goya creates his so-called Emphatic Caprices (Caprichos enfáticos), in which he criticizes the government of Ferdinand VII, which restored the fundamental principles of the Old Regime once the war was over. Some additional small groups of prints also exist, which these help us to make sense of the images or underline their content, and we will refer to these in the corresponding records.

Almost all of the prints are preceded by a preparatory drawing, of which 65 exist in total, and all of which reveal very few differences when compared to the finished etchings. Goya may have spent a long time thinking about each image before starting work on it and his vision of the scenes may have been so clear to him that he wanted to keep any changes in the final designs to a minimum.

From a technical point of view, Goya introduced a new element into this series with his use of lavis, otherwise known as open-bite etching. This is where the etching acid is applied with a brush directly on to the copperplate, with no protective ground. This technique provides soft tones and dulls the brilliance of the white areas of the paper, but without any heavy shading. His sparing use of aquatint may have been a stylistic decision, and resulted in less picturesque, more aggressive images, using the visual language of etching, drypoint and burin, with some help from the burnisher.

Compared with his other series of prints, Goya had fewer material means to work with here, making his realization of the Disasters of War series a more complicated undertaking. This was due to the shortages brought about by the war and to the fact that Goya made this series for himself, without any kind of economic backing. In fact, prints 13, 14, 15 and 16 were made on two recycled copperplates which had previously contained representations of landscapes. Added to all of this was the shortage of resins and varnishes, as well as their poor quality, leading to foul bites in the copperplates.

Goya tackled the theme of war and violence from an angle which was absolutely unprecedented in the history of art. First of all, he chose to use the medium of print, which, whilst allowing a work to reach a far wider audience, inherently favours a more intimate form of expression. Furthermore, the Disasters of War series was not a commissioned work, but rather one that came about spontaneously. This allowed Goya to work with complete freedom, reflecting upon the Spanish War of Independence in particular and upon human violence in general. Goya thus makes a clean break from traditional representations of military conflict, where it is almost always the point of view of the victor being represented and where the suffering of the vanquished is hardly ever depicted.

One of the primary sources of inspiration for Goya's Disasters of War was Les Misères et les Malheurs de la Guerre, by Jacques Callot, published in Paris in 1633. This series of prints narrates the occupation of Lorraine during the Thirty Years' War and is one of the earliest examples in art of war seen from a more realistic perspective, portraying the horror and the violence head on.

Sad presentiments of what must come to pass, the print that opens the series, is an image of deep foreboding. Shrouded in darkness, which has been rendered using short diagonal lines packed tightly together, a kneeling man holds his arms open wide and looks up at the sky. In the depths of the darkness we can just about see, almost feel, a monstrous figure lurking, perhaps a personification of the terrible events that are approaching.

This character of the pleading man in the Disasters of War vividly brings to mind both Goya's painting Christ on the Mount of Olives and the figure of Saint Isidore the Labourer, one of the prints in the artist's series on religious themes. Just as this figure seems to be praying for a miracle to divert the catastrophe hanging over him, the survivor in The Shipwreck, adopts a similar posture, although in that case the figure is asking for help following a disaster that has already taken place.

In terms of technique, this print is close to no. 69, Nothing. We shall see, and to Caprice no. 43, The sleep of reason produces monsters. In all three cases we see a lonely central figure surrounded by a creeping darkness, where monstrous creatures lie in wait.

CONSERVACIÓN

The etching plate is conserved in the National Chalcography Museum (cat. 252)

EXPOSICIONES

Grabados y dibujos de Goya en la Biblioteca Nacional
Biblioteca Nacional Madrid 1946
catalogue Elena Páez Ríos

Exposición 2 de mayo
Ayuntamiento de Madrid Madrid 1958

Brussels International Exhibition
Brussels 1958

Francisco de Goya y Lucientes, 1746-1828: retrospectivo
Musée Jacquemart-André Paris 1961

The changing image: prints by Francisco de Goya
Museum of Fine Arts 1974
From October to December 1974. Exhibited also at The National Gallery of Canada, Ottawa, January to March 1975

Goya en la Biblioteca Nacional. Exposición de grabados y dibujos en el sesquicentenario de su muerte
Biblioteca Nacional Madrid 1978
May - June 1978

Goya (1746-1828). Peintures-Dessins-Gravures
Centre Cultural du Marais Paris 1979 consultant editors Jacqueline et Maurice Guillard

Grabados de Goya: colección propiedad de la Biblioteca Nacional, que se conserva en su Gabinete de Casa de la Amistad de Moscú Moscow 1979 exhibition displayed from January 18th to 31st 1979

50 Gravuras de Goya
Fundação Calouste Gulbenkian Lisboa 1979

Goya. Das Zeitalter der Revolutionen. Kunst um 1800 (1980 - 1981)
Hamburger Kunsthalle Hamburg 1980
cat. 69

Goya: grabados
Sala de exposiciones de la Caja de Ahorros Provincial de Guipúzcoa San Sebastian 1983 exhibition celebrated from August 8th to 30th 1983

Goya. The Disaster of War and the Selected Prints from the Collection of the Arthur Ross Foundation
The Spanish Institute New York 1984 exhibition displayed from November 17th 1984 to January 16th 1985, curator Janis A. Tomlinson

André Malraux y España
Casa de España en Paris Paris 1989

Fatal Consequences: Callot, Goya and the Horrors of War
Darmouth College Hanover (New Hampshire) 1990

Francisco Goya. Sein Leben im Spiegel der Graphik.
Fuendetodos 1746-1828
Bordeaux. 1746-1996

Ydioma universal: Goya en la Biblioteca Nacional

Biblioteca Nacional Madrid 1996

from September 19th to December 15th 1996

cat. 233

Goya. Opera grafica

Pinacoteca del Castello di San Giorgio Legnano 2006

exhibition celebrated from December 16th 2006 to April 1st 2007

Goya et la modernité

Pinacothèque de Paris Paris 2013

from October 11st 2013 to March 16th 2014

cat. 40

I Disastri della Guerra. Incisioni di Francisco Goya

Palazzo Ducale Urbana 2000

exhibition celebrated from July 1st to September 30th 2000. Consultant editors John T. Spike and Feliciano Paoli

De la Guerra. Fatales consecuencias, horrores y desastres

Palacio Montcada Fraga (Huesca) 2009

exhibition displayed from April 17th to May 31st 2009, curators Antonio Garrido Moraga and José María Luna Aguilar

Galerie Kornfeld Bern 1996

from November 21st 1996 to January 1997

3 Visiones de la guerra: Jacques Callot, Francisco de Goya, Otto Dix

Fundación Bancaja Valencia 2001

Goya cronista de todas las guerras: Los desastres y la fotografía de guerra

Centro atlántico de arte moderno Las Palmas de Gran Canaria 2009 exhibition celebrated from May 15th to September 13th 2009

BIBLIOGRAFÍA

Goya, grabador

BERUETE Y MONET, Aureliano de pp. 63-118, cat. 103-206 1918 Blass S.A.

El asno cargado de reliquias en Los desastres de la guerra de Goya

Archivo español de arte GLENDINNING, Nigel pp. 221-230 35 1962

Vie et ouvre de Francisco de Goya

GASSIER, Pierre y WILSON, Juliet pp. 217-222, cat. 993-1139 1970 Office du livre

Dibujos de Goya, 2 vols

GASSIER, Pierre pp. 207-326, cat. 167-231 y 239 1975 Noguer

Vicisitudes de algunas láminas grabadas por Francisco de Goya: Los desastres de la guerra, Los disparates, La tauromaquia

Goya CARRETE PARRONDO, Juan pp. 286-293 145-150 1978-1979

Sobre la adquisición y la estampación de Los desastres de la guerra y de Los proverbios

Archivo español de arte BOELCKE-ASTOR, Catharina pp. 263-264 24 1951

Goya engravings and lithographs, vol. I y II.

HARRIS, Tomás pp. 171-297, cat. 121-203 y 203e 1964 Bruno Cassirer

Goya, Los Desastres de la Guerra

LECALDANO, Paolo 1976 Prensa Española

Goya's prints: the Tomás Harris Collection in the British Museum

WILSON-BAREU, Juliet 1981 British Museum Press

Los Desastres de la guerra de Goya y sus dibujos preparatorios

LAFUENTE FERRARI, Enrique 1952

Goya: Los aguafuertes

Antonio F. Fuster 1964 Goya Hispano-Inglesa de Reaseguros, S.A.

The Changing image: Prints by Francisco Goya

SAYRE, Eleanor 1974 Museum of Fine Arts

A solution to the enigma of Goya's emphatic caprices nº 65-80 of The Disasters of War

Apollo GLENDINNING, Nigel pp. 186-191 107 1978

Fuentes emblemáticas del asno cargado de reliquias de la serie Los desastres de la guerra de Goya 1982

Goya ALCALÁ FLECHA, Roberto pp. 274-278 167-168 1982

Goya, The Disasters of War and

El árbol evanescente

La obra grabada de Goya

Goya. The Disasters of War and Selected Prints from the Collection of the Arthur Foundation

TOMLINSON, Janis A.
1984-1985
The Spanish Institute

Fatal Consequences: Callot, Goya and the Horrors of War

1990
Dartmouth College

Fatales consecuencias de la guerra. Francisco de Goya, pintor

VEGA, Jesusa
1992
Casser

Ydioma universal: Goya en la Biblioteca Nacional

SANTIAGO PÁEZ, Elena y WILSON-BAREAU, Juliet (comisarias)
219
1996
Biblioteca Nacional, Sociedad Estatal Goya 96 y Lunweg

El Libro de los Desastres de la Guerra

BLAS BENITO, Javier and MATILLA, José Manuel 2000
Museo del Prado

Goya y el Mundo Moderno

LOMBA, Concepción y BOZAL, Valeriano (comisarios)
pp. 276-289
2008
Fundación Goya en Aragón y Lunweg

OROPESA, Marisa and RINCÓN GARCÍA, Wilfredo

p. 120
2013
Pinacoteca de París

El árbol goyesco

Goya, nuevas visiones: homenaje a Enrique Lafuente Ferrari
BOZAL, Valeriano
pp.119-132
1987
Fundación Amigos del Museo del Prado

Museo del Prado. Catálogo de las Estampas

VEGA, Jesusa
1992
Museo del Prado y Ministerio de Cultura

Los emblemas morales de Francisco de Goya y de Sebastián de Covarrubias

Goya
MOFFIT, John F.
pp. 45-56
241-242
1994

Goya ¡Qué valor! Caprichos. Desastres. Tauromaquia. Disparates

CENTELLAS, Ricardo, FATÁS CABEZA, Guillermo and CARRETE PARRONDO, Juan
pp. 108-190
1996
Caja de Ahorros de la Inmaculada

I Disastri della Guerra. Incisioni di Francisco Goya

2000
Il lavoro editoriale

De la Guerra. Fatales consecuencias, horrores y desastres

LUNA AGUILAR, José María and GARRIDO MORAGA, Antonio
2009
Ayuntamiento de Fraga

Goya. In the Norton Simon Museum

WILSON BAREAU, Juliet
pp. 114-151
2016
Norton Simon Museum

La obra grabada de Goya

El grabado en España, siglos XV-XVIII
BOZAL, Valeriano
pp. 712-756
1987
Summa Artis, XXXI

Non si può guardare. Dallo spettacolo della giustizia al crollo dei miti della civiltà. La guerra nell'opera di Callot e Goya

Le incisioni di Jacques Callot nelle collezioni italiane
STOLL, André
pp. 90-93
1992
Mazzotta

The Dating and Interpretation of Goya's Disasters of War

Print Quarterly
VEGA, Jesusa
pp. 3-17
II
1994

Catálogo de las estampas de Goya en la Biblioteca Nacional

SANTIAGO, Elena M. (coordinadora)
pp 121-190, cat. 176-309
1996
Ministerio de Educación y Cultura, Biblioteca Nacional

Goya, obra gráfica completa

CASARIEGO, Rafael
2004
Casariego

Francisco de Goya. Los Desastres de la guerra

GALEGO GARCÍA, Raquel
2011
La Central

ENLACES EXTERNOS